Spring and the fact that the gates have been opened at the dam to make repairs at the power house, the water in Pea River has fallent to a point where it is lower than it has been in years. To look at the river at its present stage it is hard for one who did not see it to believe that it could ever overflow its banks and spread out and become fifteen feet deep on Elba's public square.

The repairs were finished at the dam Saturday and the gates closed Sunday, and the river is gradually rising to its normal stage.

A Debutante's Quest For Love

Man Made The

By Ruby Ayres

RUBY AYRES is famous for her ability to write swift-moving romances that touch the heart and entertain the mind. Her new

Man Made The Town

is in her very best vein.

Her heroine, Diana, is a lovely, wayward girl, who has flung herself fervently into the social round, partly out of youthful love of gaiety, partly to forget the wound a man has dealt her pride.

The hero is a noted young physician who knows how to heal bodies, and souls, too, but cannot keep himself from pain. Nor can he shield Diana from a new hurt.

Other characters claim important roles--Dennis, for instance, the fascinating man-ofthe-world, and Rosalie, the strange, red-haired woman who plays so mysterious a part in the doctor's life-thing that got Sallie's goat was listening to big strong men as they told about how they needed things. Just hundreds of them reported that they had no supplies to go on and no money, job or furnish for the year. Sallie thinks when you either will not work, does not think or throws his money away. She says that any man can support his family with a bunch of chickens if he cannot do better.

With her usual skill Mrs. Ayres spins her tale, through one interesting episode after another, to a dramatic finale.
